

Moon Pool: Book One in the Moon Pool Trilogy

Im freezing on a midnight mountain, wondering how to escape the snarling dogs and the snowmobiles. If I survive, I swear Rafael will wish he had never met me or my big mouth. Im angry about the future; a future of empty oceans and silent forests, a world where sea turtles and bluefin tuna, sharks, sawfish, wolves, elephants and honey bees are all extinct. Thanks to the stupidity of adults. But its not the future, its the past that spins my life like a kick-faced disc drive. I was in Brussels when someone gave me a letter from my Dad. Yeah, the absent marine biologist presumed dead one. Which was weird. He wants rescuing. Joining me on the mad race across Europe is Rafael, a geek and gadget freak. The little voice in my head tells me not to trust him, but little voices are there to be ignored, arent they? The more I learn about Dad the more uneasy I become. What does he really do? Why is he in hiding? And what does his letter mean by a discovery that changes the world? A fast-paced and gripping action adventure - courage, betrayal, survival and discovery. Thought provoking and unforgettable. ...an excellent concept; if youre at all interested in conservation, ocean conservation, ocean creatures, their intelligence and interactions with us I recommend you pick this book up. .... It got my heart going at times, I was impressed with the thrill of it, always moving.
