

Internet Chinese

Internet Chinese aims at helping students read the online information more efficiently and to communicate in Chinese. The first part of the book introduces the internet-related basic technological knowledge, so that the users can master the Windows system and the related browsers in Chinese. The second part places emphasis on Chinese language study. Thirteen occasions of using Chinese on the Internet are selected, each as a unit with four parts, including the example sentences, reading, notes and the supplementary materials. The appendices list the most popular websites in various categories including career, employment and the HSK test. With b&w illustrations and tables.
