

Translation Theories and Studies Part 1: Compilation of the Best Articles written on Translation Theories and Studies and submitted to translation journal.net ... (Articles From Translation Journal Book 7)

The first article is very amusing and focuses on a discussion between interpreters on the first language of a bilingual and how that affects the results of their work. The theories covered in the following articles vary from fidelity (between source and target languages), sentence splitting, communication breakdowns, text entropy and ttr changes to name a few. There are also articles discussing how visual impairments can affect translators and their work and tips on how to deal with translation agencies.
